

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An apparatus and method for combined raking and baling of either baleable crops or after-harvest stalks, stubble, and trash. A rake is installed in front of the operating throat of a baler. The rake channels materials into the baler throat in the same pass over the field to effectively improve on the baling efficiency and/or extend the area of ground coverage for the implement.